SILBER GALLERY EXHIBITION

REDISCOVERING GOUCHER'S LOST MUSEUM

Ungar Athenaeum
Friday, Saturday & Sunday
11 a.m. – 4 p.m.

Rediscovering Goucher's Lost Museum reconstitutes the remnants of the former museum of the Woman's College of Baltimore, a universal collection of natural history, art, and ethnography assembled in the late 19th century. The show, supported by a National Endowment for the Humanities grant, explores the history and legacy of Goucher's historic museum and the power of exhibition as an agent of storytelling. A collaboration among faculty, staff, and students, the exhibition considers the shifting practices and ethics of collecting and diverse narrative strategies for telling the complicated history of objects. Goucher's Lost Museum features storied artifacts and specimens, facsimiles, fictions, speculations, and the artistic contribution of contemporary artists whose work addresses ethical and archival gaps in museum and field research practices.

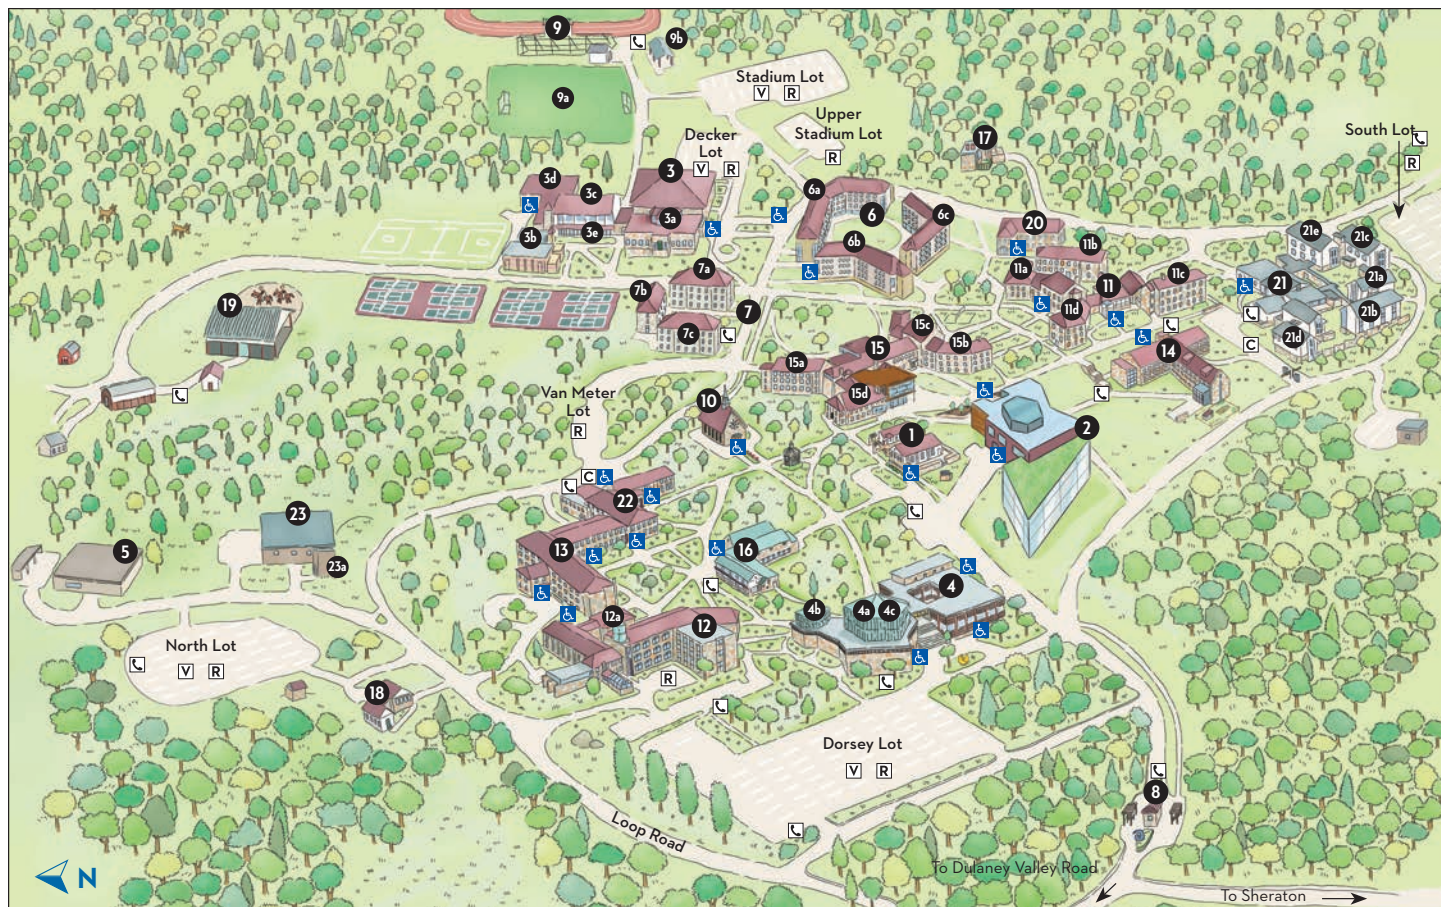

ROSENBERG GALLERY EXHIBITION

SOME OF ITS PARTS

Dorsey College Center
10 a.m. – 5 p.m.

In the Rosenberg Gallery, Natan Lawson presents a solo exhibition of CNC-aided paintings arranged in diptychs and triptychs titled Some of Its Parts. Lawson is a Baltimore-based painter whose work combines found and hand-rendered imagery of textiles, children's drawings, book illustrations, and nostalgic ephemera. The imagery is simultaneously autobiographical and universal, familiar to an '80s and '90s upbringing. Lawson revisits and monumentalizes these bygone aesthetics as meditation on collective and personal loss.
