Course Description

This course will focus on the AP Chinese Language and Culture course and exam in relation to World-readiness Standards that serve as overarching principles for the development of curricular framework. Consultant and participants will discuss and brainstorm research-supported best practices, illustrate step-by-step instructions for creating a truly communicative and interactive immersive setting, and demonstrate effective instructional strategies in enhancing student performance in all three modes of communications (interpersonal, interpretive, and presentational). Participants will gain hands-on experiences in planning daily lessons, assessing student responses by using grading criteria and rubrics applicable for AP Chinese and develop sample formative and summative assessments for their local classrooms. The entire group will also share and examine effective instructional resources.

Topics will include the following:

- Use of CED
- Integration of the ACTFL World Readiness Standards in instruction
- Examination of sample student answers from free response sections of an actual AP exam as well as released scoring guidelines for these sections
- Preparing daily lesson plans
- Teaching Reading Comprehension
- Cultural integration into the AP course o Authentic materials, immersion environment and differentiated instruction
- OPI Proficiency Guidelines for Oral Assessments

- Best practices and classroom strategies in improving student performance

What participants should bring:

- CED
- Your favorite thematic unit
- Authentic materials you have used in your classes
- Any other items you think might be helpful for discussions and exchanges
- A list of technology tools and apps you have used
- Your laptop
