

Careers for MACS students - Craft Your Future

Culture underlies everything we do. This notion is still revolutionary, but is becoming clearer every day. The demand for individuals who know how to effectively interact with different communities and cultures—and who understand how to effect real change based on those observations and interactions—will continue to increase as we outgrow our planet, our resources, and our old ways of doing things. MACS graduates are blazing the trail towards a new vision of sustainability.

90% of our alumni are currently employed per the chart below

87% are working in jobs specifically related to their graduate degree:

- Directors of folklife and community arts organizations
- Museum educators
- Travel writers
- PhD students / teaching
- Tribal cultural leaders
- Founders and Directors of community-building social service organizations
- Culturally-aware health care providers
- Refugee resettlement workers
- Project managers
- Outreach specialists
- Events designers and coordinators
- College professors